

My wife and I are financial supporters of K-Love. Our family actively listens to the Grand Island and Hastings frequencies daily. It's one of the few consistent kid-friendly and adult-friendly opportunities available to us. (note: I define "adult" in this context as mature, not the XXX trash version.)

I believe this proposal before the FCC is poor public policy. There are a lot of other things the FCC can be doing to clean up the airwaves rather than making things more difficult to organizations that are positively affecting real lives. Sometimes, the efforts and resources of these organizations are saving lives. These are the same lives that could be putting more strains on social services if it weren't for these organizations, actually taking broken lives and turning (or returning) them into productive citizens. All without asking for a dime from the US government. What a bargain for the taxpayers!!

Please leave something that's working just fine alone. I'll be watching to ensure you make the right decision.
